Rosalind daylily 1941

Rarest & It's Back!

On sale now! Last offered in 2021. One of the most famous daylilies of all, this wild beauty was the best of the three reddish forms of Hemerocallis fulva sent to A.B. Stout from China in 1924 – and which Stout used to breed the very first of the thousands of pink, red, and purple daylilies that have graced gardens ever since then. Rusty red with a darker eye-zone, 38-42", late-mid, dormant, 2 large fans, zones 4a-8a(10aWC), from our own micro-farm. Chart and care.

Wisconsin Red dahlia 1910?

Rarest

On sale now! This striking family heirloom with its ruby flowers on dark stems is SO easy to grow and store that it's been a pass-along plant in Wisconsin since the early 1900s. We got our start from our friend Vytas Virkau who got it from Catherine Becker of Wausaukee who'd been growing it since the 1940s. Then we met Brenda and John Hagman whose family has been passing it down since 1910 or before – or so it seems. Learn more here, or just plant it and join the tradition! Ball, 3", 4-5', heat-tolerant, grown for us in Oregon. Chart and care.

Thomas Edison dahlia 1929

On sale now! This velvety classic is still the truest deep purple of all dahlias, a color that photos can't quite capture but that modern breeders envy. It was "named for the famous Electrical Wizard with his approval," according to the L.L. Old's catalog of 1939. Grow it and we think you'll agree – it's electrifying! Formal decorative, 6-8", 3-4', heat-tolerant, from Holland. Chart, care, and learn more.
